How to appeal against GCSE results

Steps to take to appeal against GCSE results

1. Once you've received your results, you can appeal to your school or college if you would like to. Teachers should have already made students aware of the evidence submitted and made sure it was the students own work.
2. If a student wishes to appeal, centres should undertake an initial process review to check all processes were followed correctly and no errors have been made. If the school finds an error, they can submit a revised grade to the exam board.
3. If the student still wants to appeal, they will ask their school to submit a formal appeal to the exam board for them. The exam board will check the centre followed its own processes and exam board requirements as well as reviewing the evidence used to form their judgement and providing a view as to whether the grade awarded was a reasonable exercise of academic judgement.
4. In cases of disagreement between the centre and the exam board, or if the student disagrees with the centre or the exam board, the case can be referred to Ofqual's Exams Procedure Review Service (EPRS). The exam board's decision on the grade following the appeal will stand unless the EPRS finds that the exam board has made a procedural error.
